◆◆◆ AUN HEALTH UNIVERSITY FRAMEWORK (HUF)

In 2017, AUN Health University Framework (HUF) was published, being the reference guide for universities in health promotion at university level.

It describes health promotion initiatives in ASEAN universities, principal determinants of a healthy university, implementation of a healthy university framework, and mechanisms for assessment – monitoring – evaluation of a healthy university.

The 22 areas of HUF are divided into three areas:

1. Systems Infrastructure
2. Thematic Areas of Zero Tolerance
3. Health Promotion

More Information

◆◆◆ HEALTHY UNIVERSITY RATING SYSTEM (HURS)

The Healthy University Rating System (HURS) is a key tool for tracking and assessing the progress of health-promoting universities, aligned with the AUN Healthy University Framework (HUF). Approved during the 12th ASEAN University Network Rectors' Meeting on July 9, 2021, HURS helps monitor each university's achievements in fostering a healthy environment.

The system uses a star rating to highlight strengths, promoting well-being and leadership in health promotion across campuses. It encourages universities to create a healthy campus environment, benefiting students, staff, and the broader community.

HURS focuses on 22 framework areas and holds an annual evaluation period from August 15 to November 16, starting with its first round in 2021. Right now, more than 30 ASEAN universities participated in the evaluation, with the goal of driving continuous health promotion efforts among network universities.

CONFERENCE BACKGROUND AND RATIONALE

THE 10th ANNIVERSARY OF THE ASEAN UNIVERSITY NETWORK – HEALTH PROMOTION NETWORK (AUN-HPN)

The ASEAN University Network – Health Promotion Network (AUN-HPN) was established in 2014 as a thematic network under the ASEAN University Network (AUN). Over the past decade, AUN-HPN has played a pivotal role in fostering collaboration among universities and individuals across the ASEAN region, all united by a shared commitment to advancing health promotion and creating a healthier society. As a regional network, AUN-HPN has successfully bridged the gap between academia and the broader community, facilitating research, knowledge exchange, and capacity-building initiatives that address pressing health challenges in the region.

In 2024, we proudly celebrate the 10th anniversary of AUN-HPN's establishment. This milestone event not only honors the network's achievements over the past decade but also serves as an opportunity to reflect on the journey ahead. To mark this special occasion, we will convene the 10th anniversary of AUN-HPN's establishment back-to-back with the annual AUN-HPN International Advisory Committee meeting, bringing together key stakeholders and thought leaders to discuss the future direction of health promotion in the ASEAN region.

The AUN-HPN has been instrumental in promoting the role of higher education in health promotion, with Mahidol University in Thailand currently convening the Network. The success of the network relies on the advisory support from member universities of the ASEAN University Network (AUN), ensuring that programs are effectively implemented to benefit both member and non-member universities, as well as the ASEAN community at large.

To further strengthen the Network, the AUN-HPN International Advisory Committee was established, inviting AUN member universities to nominate representatives to join. The Committee's role is to provide a conceptual framework, guidance, and strategic direction for the AUN-HPN's work plan. The AUN-HPN International Advisory Committee (IAC) meeting is held annually, with the aim of enhancing collaboration and advancing health promotion efforts across the ASEAN region.

CONFERENCE BACKGROUND AND RATIONALE

THE 1st AIHD INTERNATIONAL FORUM

"SYNERGIZING GLOBAL HEALTH, PRIMARY HEALTH CARE, AND HEALTH PROMOTION FOR A SUSTAINABLE FUTURE"

Primary health care and health promotion have been recognized by the international community as the key elements to reorient health care and services to be more equitable, affordable, and effective. Nonetheless, promoting coverage in terms of services and quality of care for primary health care and health promotion is challenged by social determinants of health and commercial determinants of health that indirectly influence the health and well-being of the people. Therefore, endeavors to ensure the coverage of primary health care and health promotion require inclusiveness of partners from the non-health sector to sustainably enable good governance and practice to encourage "health for all".

Though Thailand is globally recognized for its success in implementing primary health care, the dynamicity of global context ranging from geopolitical conflicts to climate change usher the needs for the country to look into future opportunities and threats that can affect the sustainability of primary health care and health promotion. Therefore, ASEAN Institute for Health Development (AIHD), Mahidol University organizes an international forum under the title "Synergizing Global Health, Primary Health Care, and Health Promotion for a Sustainable Future" in light of sharing state of the arts in primary health care and health promotion as well as future directions that Thailand may pioneering to create model of sustainable health for all.

EXPECTED OUTCOMES

- Strengthened and Expanded Networks: Enhanced collaboration among AUN member universities and new opportunities for future partnerships through networking with global health experts, leading to more effective health promotion initiatives.
- Strategic and Actionable Plans: A well-defined AUN-HPN work plan, informed by collective insights, along with practical strategies and ideas that participants can implement in their respective institutions and countries.
- Resource Sharing and Integrated Insights: Access to valuable resources and best practices, combined with a deeper understanding of how to synergize global health, primary health care, and health promotion for sustainable outcomes.
- Policy Development: Formulation of policy recommendations addressing critical social and commercial determinants of health, supporting equitable and sustainable health promotion efforts.
